If your idea of a community pharmacy Advanced Pharmacy Practice Experience (APPE) is dispensing tablets all day, you don't know Kerr Health. For over a decade, the Kerr clinical division has led the pharmacy profession in the delivery of innovative, community-based pharmacy services and robust experiential training of PharmD candidates. Kerr Health is the first partner with whom the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy has entered into collaboration to make quality experiential rotations available nationally. Our professional APPE puts you in the center of community patient care in the setting of your choice—from fast-paced city life to high-need rural areas. This challenging program will be the learning experience of a lifetime, achieved in a month or two under some of the best teachers in the country.

Award Winning Preceptors

Kerr Health preceptors are doctors of pharmacy who have completed ASHP/APhA-accredited residencies and are certified and credentialed in areas of expertise including immunization delivery, medication therapy management, pain management, diabetes, asthma, dyslipidemia, hypertension, and osteoporosis.

Our pharmacists are preceptors for Campbell University, Drake University, LECOM (FL and PA), Mercer University, Ohio Northern University, The Ohio State University, South Carolina College of Pharmacy—Medical University and USC campuses, University of Colorado/Denver, University of North Carolina Eshelman School of Pharmacy, Wilkes University, and Wingate University. We have strong collaborations with our partnering schools of pharmacy, where we have adjunct and shared faculty members and offer practice sites for community-based faculty.

The Kerr Health Program

An APPE with Kerr Health provides students with a wealth of progressive pharmacy services and experiences in the community setting. The Kerr Health program also meets the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE) requirement for completion of an advanced community pharmacy clerkship experience. Kerr Health has built a practice model that, while advancing the dispensing model, promotes a variety of innovative patient care services, including immunization delivery, medication therapy management through state and national programs, a comprehensive diabetes education program recognized by the American Diabetes Association, and employee wellness programs such as health fairs and individual and group disease-state management. Our practice sites offer patient diversity at various locations across North Carolina and in Charleston, South Carolina.
